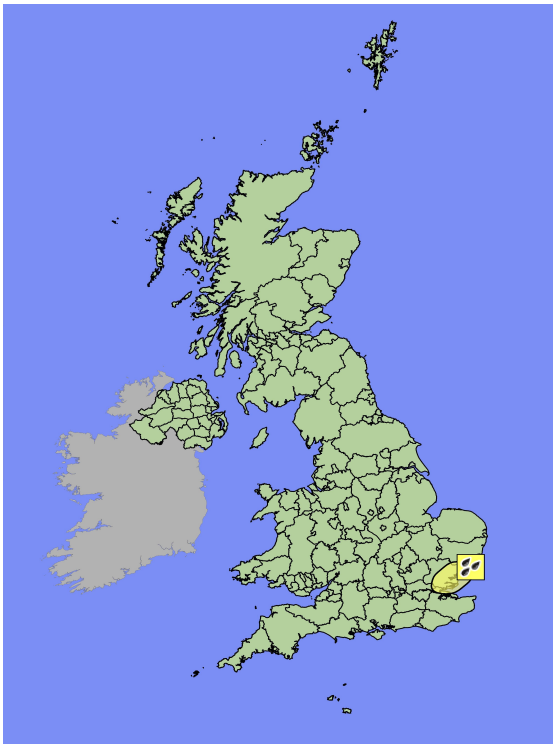
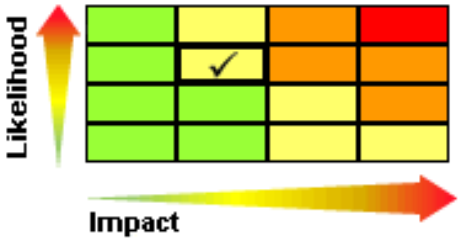
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Outbreaks of rain, collocated with the centre of a slow moving area of low pressure, will continue during the second half of the night. Some of the rain is likely to be heavy with accumulations of 10 to 20mm falling widely within the warning area and as much as 30mm locally.

The rain will ease during the early morning as the low centre moves away to the east.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:15 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012 until 06:00 on Tue, 27th Nov 2012

Outbreaks of rain, some of it heavy, will continue during the second half of tonight, easing towards dawn. The public should be prepared for the risk of localised flooding and some disruption to transport.
